NOVA ET VETERA

"The Kingdom of heaven is like a house-holder who takes from his treasures both old things and new."

Notre Dame has faithfully preserved the best of its traditional activities and spirit. At the same time it looks for and welcomes those new elements that will enrich the lives of its students in their striving for intellectual, social and religious maturity. These pages spell out the story of a year in which "old things and new" have made their contributions to our present happiness and future success.

CREDO

The home of Notre Dame High School is in the Southside of Elmira. Daily, Catholic youths of Elmira and vicinity tread their way along Maple Ave., Caton Avenue and in through N. D.'s doors. Boys and girls from Elmira Heights, Southport, Horseheads, "the valley" and Elmira . . . students representing 14 parishes . . . swell the tide in N. D.'s halls. For 780 youths, all roads lead daily to the Southside, Maple Avenue, to Notre Dame!

NOTRE DAME

HIGH SCHOOL

NEW YORK

Sister Mary Raphael

This year we at Notre Dame have witnessed numerous changes in our school, particularly those in administration. Sister Alberta, our competent vice principal for seven years, became principal, while Sister Raphael, who for seven years guided the destinies of hundreds of Notre Damers, was transferred to Rochester and a new position.

To these two women admired and respected by all, we wish to dedicate the 1963 Credo. We hope their enthusiasm and dedication will inspire others to emulate them and we humbly express our gratitude for their guidance and attention.

To Sister Mary Raphael we say "Thank You" for many years of faithful service and

To Sister Mary Alberta we say "Welcome" to her new position at Notre Dame. A familiar friend in a new setting exemplifies the spirit in which we review these four important years.

Sister Mary Alberta

DEDICATION

His Holiness, POPE JOHN XXIII

Our Holy Father embodies in himself the contrasting elements of our theme this year. Prudent and wise, he insists that the essentials of our faith may never be sacrificed to change simply for its own sake. At the same time, he has set aside, without hesitation, those traditions that are no longer valuable in spreading God's kingdom on earth. It is in this spirit that he has called the present Council; it is in this spirit that he works and prays for renewal within the Church, and renewal for the entire world to which the Church carries Christ's message.

SENIORS

And we ring out the old year as we welcome the new. Jubilant seniors, meeting the bright and fresh newness of June, breathe in the new life, the new day dawning. Yesterday was another thing. Yesterday there were troubles, there were workloads and days when the sun didn't shine. Tomorrow, ah, tomorrow is another day, a new day. Graduation is the dawn.

Tomorrow is the day. But stop! Wait a minute. Weren't there at least a few stars in yesterday's darkness? And weren't there some very sunny days? But seniors don't live in the past. They look to each dawn with the prospect of gaining a place in the day's sun. They live for tomorrow, leaving yesterday for memories and today for the work and sunshine.

CLASS OFFICERS

Underclass officers look to the future with expectation, to new horizons with anticipation.

STUDENTS

Each one a part of the whole, each one a pebble on the beach, yet each one individual. Each one a piece of the school, each one a face in the crowd, yet each one different.
Each and all. All and each.
The whole is composed of the sum of its parts.
And each shining, different, independent individual, when fitted into his place, rounds out and completes the gleaming wheel, rolling on to progress, to even higher goals and dreams, to victory and achievement.

Anthony Ciccotti and Marie Barnoski set up the apparatus and prepare the experiment of which . . .

202 is tops in the mite box collection and Rosemary Doty, Kathleen Kinner, Dorothy Dombroski, Gerald Rosplock, Mary Kent and Donald Miller proudly display the Mission Flag acquired as a result.

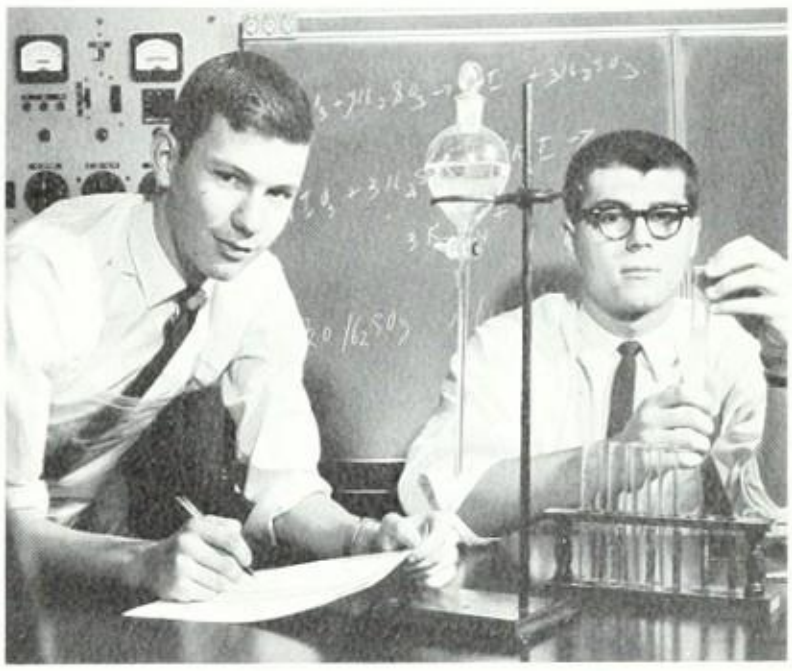
202

James Caroscio, Ann Maloney, Gary Loughran, Nancy Ault, Michael Schiefen, Robert Bennett, Paul Bailey, Christine Stalis, David Conklin (standing) and Rosalie Fiori, Katherine Dyer, Elizabeth Eckman and Tom Cieri wait for the office to open with the beginning of another school day.

JUNIORS

The world of the junior is a junior world. It is a half-grown and a half not-grown up world. The junior world is a happy one. It is, in fact, a filter. Like a camera filter that blocks out undesired shades of color, the junior filter blocks out undesirable traits in the world about him. This is not to say that the average junior does not face reality. Actually, he is well aware of the world about him. He just sees life in a different color. The light of reality is refracted in the glass prism of the junior and is reflected in soft and varied colors. Chief among these is the rosy hue of a junior world that's in the pink.

Margaret MacKenzie and Edmund Maloney ponder the Chemistry procedure while . . .



Thomas Spruck and John Barnoski examine and record the results.

Mission day brings work and prizes for Joseph Bogardus, Betty Jane Fusare, Charles Cramer, Michael Stoddard, Elaine Belligotti, Roger Barber, Helen Leahy, Donna Danna and Nicholas Moffe.

"And this is called the maniple," says Father Reinhart to Michael Moran, John Farley, Margaret Babcock, William Battisti, Polly Broga, Barbara Tighe, John Post and Carole Lepere.

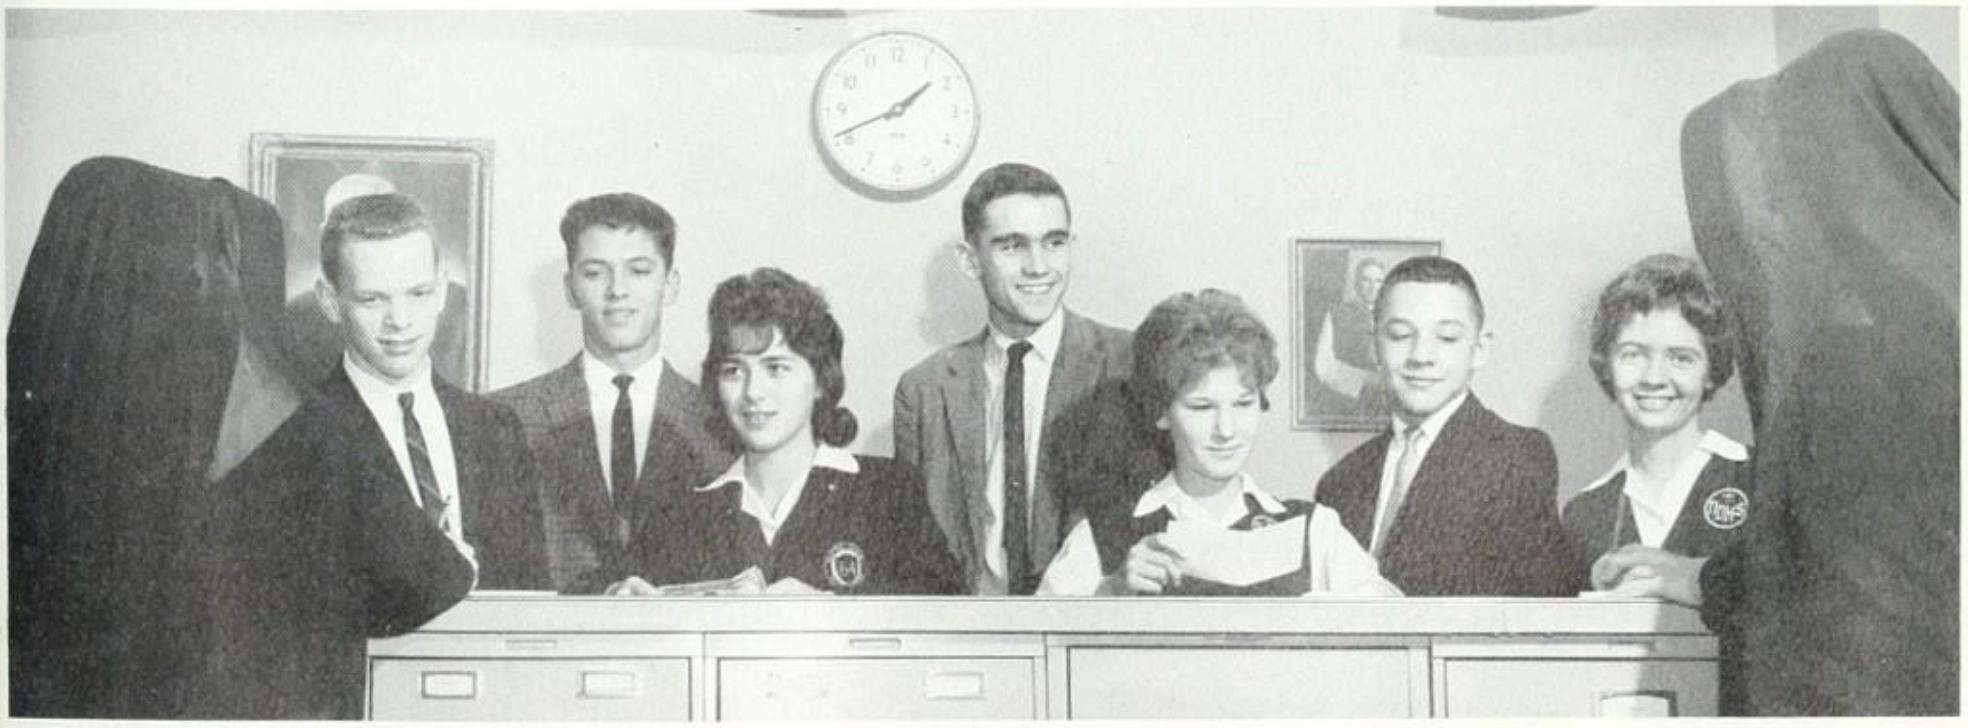
ster M. Borromeo, Bernadette Bauer, Kermit ckley and Henry Cross find it enjoyable to listen the French "U", but . . .

ster, Joan McCarthy, Rinaldo Saginario and Jo- na Parrella find pronouncing it a little harder.

Dolores Brennan, Thomas Donnells, Mary Lou McManus, Susan Aiello, Frederick Rouse and Lynne MacNamara proudly exhibit an architect's concept of the new Notre Dame.

JUNIORS

All roads lead to the office for Raymond Marks, Edward Vaioli, Constance Swift, Donald Kent, Colleen Griffin, Michael Johnston and Cynthia Bistran.



Patricia O'Brien, John A. McCarthy, Elizabeth Patterson, Albert Harris, Joanne Lynott and Kathleen McDonnell work in sin and cos in Eleventh Year Math.

The junior is an optimist. Everything will come out all right in time. Not like the underclassman who is often quite unaware of life and not like the senior who is determined and active in his drive, the junior is aware of life and sympathetic to its problems. He prefers, however, his own happier society. He is an optimist, who still has another year for worrying and for serious matters. But for the junior year the important thing is to keep one's head above water — to be accepted in his own society before he expands into the cold society of the world. The junior concentrates on his school work. This is within his realm. He engages spiritedly in activities. This is also a part of his realm, because it is socially acceptable.

Daniel Gingrich, Carole Limoncelli, Timothy Cross, Jerome McCarthy, Sandra Toomey, Michael Breed, Ellen Rice, Robert Stevens, Kathleen Madigan, Carolyn Burke and Anna Deibler take advantage of the new pop machines installed this year for such opportune moments.

Morris Karski, Thomas Novick, (standing) Margaret Brady, Rose Marie Caporiccio, (sitting) and Jean Hintz (kneeling) work with x's and y's in Intermediate Algebra.

At end of classes Daniel Bednarek, Elizabeth Robertson, Mary Allmendinger, Carol Malandra, Marilyn Pellingra, Kathleen Hayes and Robert Weigand congregate at the water fountain.

Peter Punzo, John McMahon, Richard Essen, Patricia Masia, Mary Kay Owen, Michael Kelly, Marjorie Kent and Richard Trampenau head for the bus at 3:15.

JUNIORS

Mr. Hogan advises Sharon Philbin, Lauren Brown and Maureen Lynch to leave the first floor and go to their homeroom.

Arlene Scheer, Elizabeth Amisano, Curran Sekella and Thomas Murray acquire an appreciation of art.

Morning chatter on the upper floor is terminated as Mr. Teta ushers Louise Richard, Catherine Walsh, Joan Farmer and Robert Schiefen into their homeroom.

Mary DeSocio, John Grady, Patricia Ryan, Thomas D'Andrea, Michael Wesneski, (standing) Christine Dooher and Elizabeth Merriam call home to find out the good (?) news on the day report cards come out.

205

Joan Coffey, John Hughes, Catharine Creighton, Amelia Ciarrocca, Barbara Dooley and Joseph Brewer indicate our newly acquired landmark.

Sr. Carmella welcomes James Madell, Michael Sechrist, John Cain, Kathleen Colegrove, Mary Rita Supple, Peggy Sheehan and Joel Sweet to her homeroom and introduces them to her "Board of Education."

Ronald Limoncelli, Carol Coveney, William Knott and Frances Shon hand in their finished projects to Sr. M. Declan.

John K. McCarthy, Carol Rockett, John Delaney (standing), Barbara Schmieg, Marie Sheehe and Douglas Smith begin the first step in their American Heritage reports—finding appropriate articles.

Michele Devon, Carol Morrell, Robert Kessing, and Thomas Hair skim source material for notes—the second step.

The junior becomes more aware of the world around him. He sees that there is, indeed, a greedy world out there, waiting to absorb him into its cold complexities. He learns of the past. He learns why and how his American government is run and why the Civil War was fought. The junior learns to examine exalted deeds and heroes with merciless questioning. The junior learns to make the other man back up his statements. Test tube and slide rule provide the weapons of his offensive. Interpretation of literature and the stern demands of clear exposition temper his strategy. The junior finds that the Church of his ancestors is not perfect. It is not perfect, he learns, because it is composed of imperfect men. But this does not disillusion the junior. This knowledge makes him aware of himself, his own faults, and those of the world around him. He begins to understand and to grasp. Reality, still refracted through the prism, takes on a different light. The junior is formed, ready to go to the annealing process of the senior year.

Donna Mosch, Bailey Bowers and Barbara Augustine pause for idle chatter after lunch.

Ronald Limoncelli, Carol Coveney, William Knott and Frances Shon hand in their finished projects to Sr. M. Declan.

SOPHOMORES

Kathleen King (right) urges Soph cooperation in selling Mission Day play tickets to Regina Gush, Mary Lou Caparulo (sitting), Kathleen Crippen, Carol Shays, Kathleen Mitrus and Kathleen Ellis (standing).

Kathleen Brann, Joanne Havens, Mary Lou Harrington, Linda Mallette and Linda McInerny listen while Carol Valois stresses the importance of the March of Dimes drive.

Anita Apostale, Margaret Madigan, Marlene Cieri, Suzanne Florack, Roslyn Spallone, Joanne Stadelmaier, Dianne Tucker, Margaret Eagleson, Kathleen Bruno and Jacqueline Hinds show the whole is equal to the sum of its parts with a Nestle's Crunch.

Mary Ellen Palmeter, Rose Marie Schiefen (seated), Cynthia Ford, Dorothy Goff, Lucy Esposito, Patricia Cloke and Beth Wilson (standing) scrutinize a scroll of figures in Bookkeeping.

Mary Lou Spallone, Michele New, Marie Read (first row), Arlene Daddona, Laura Pesesky, Sharon Stroup (second row), Joanne Boscaino, Anne Kromer, Marjorie Rauber (third row), and Mary Hewitt (fourth row), are interrupted in their study of Religion II with Sr. M. Leo.

Out of bewilderment into obscurity. Another step in education and another in life. A step up to graduation—a step down from the spotlight. Thus walks the sophomore. He walks out of the novelty, the confusion, the wonder of his first year in high school into the established, the familiar, the initiated second year high. He is a bit disillusioned at his status—still at the foot of the path. He is disillusioned that high school means very solid work, very menial drudgery, very little tinsel. He makes up for this with school spirit. He joins clubs. He rolls bandages. He wears a Notre Dame jacket. He is a full-fledged high-schooler.

Doreen Sheehan, Cheryl Nelson, Christine Raniewicz and Mary Laux listen attentively as Marilyn Ripley gives the Student Council report.

SOPHOMORES

"Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" ponder biology students Jean Cavallaro, Catherine MacKenzie, Virginia Loughran, Marilyn Vetukevic, Kathleen Young and Maryanne Price as Sister Jane Frances looks on.

"Up only after sixth period" for these French I students: Patricia Gallagher, Ann Caroscio, Phyllis Dombroski, Marie Stewart and Mary Lou Hewitt.

Sophomores Suzanne Brougham, Sharon Ferraro, Mary Gawlas, Patricia Maloney, Karen Sherbak, Constance Rockett, Dianne Morrell, Sharon Davis and Carol Langstine take time out to romp in the snow before boarding the buses for home.

The sophomore re-enters Notre Dame in the spirit of being a part, a statistic, in the whole. He takes up his workload with familiar second year subjects. These subjects, too, are disillusioning. They are far more difficult, more advanced. They scrape away the frosting and begin on the cake.

Kathleen Gauthier, Priscilla Hart, Mary Lee Cannon, Eileen Crane (sitting), Mary Jane Bednarek, Marijon Meck find Communism a greater Project in 1963 than ever before.

Shorthand students, Sharon Robertson, Francine Pona, Sharon Ungvarsky, and Kathleen Collins, try out their skill at the blackboard.

Showing 100% satisfaction with their 100% cooperation in the Credo Patron Drive, Sylvester Zielinski, John Hall, David Tallman, Richard Haldeman and George Maloney look over the drive's report.

Thomas Levanduski, Edward Cramer, Timothy Backes, Michael Collins, Matthew Cary, Michael Painton, James Spallone, Brian Holleran, Dennis Godwin, and Michael Applin listen attentively before exercising their vocal chords in Sopomore singing.

SOPHOMORES

Second-year students struggle with a foreign language—Latin, German, French. Pronunciation and irregular forms, dependent clauses and the proper ending for the perfect tense—all these confuse them and weigh upon their growing shoulders. They grow with the weight of work. They begin clear and clever thinking.

"So this is what's behind that locked door" exclaim . . . Dennis Nurnberg, Mike Congdon, Mike Lynch, Patrick Moreo, Charles Comereski, John Dartt, Richard Budnik, Edward Kesser, and Henry Lockwood as Mr. Tessier condescends to show them the men's faculty room.

Training for the world of business begins. Orderly columns of figures in a bank statement; neatness and precision in handling a typewriter—these are beginners' skills, a foundation for a life's work.

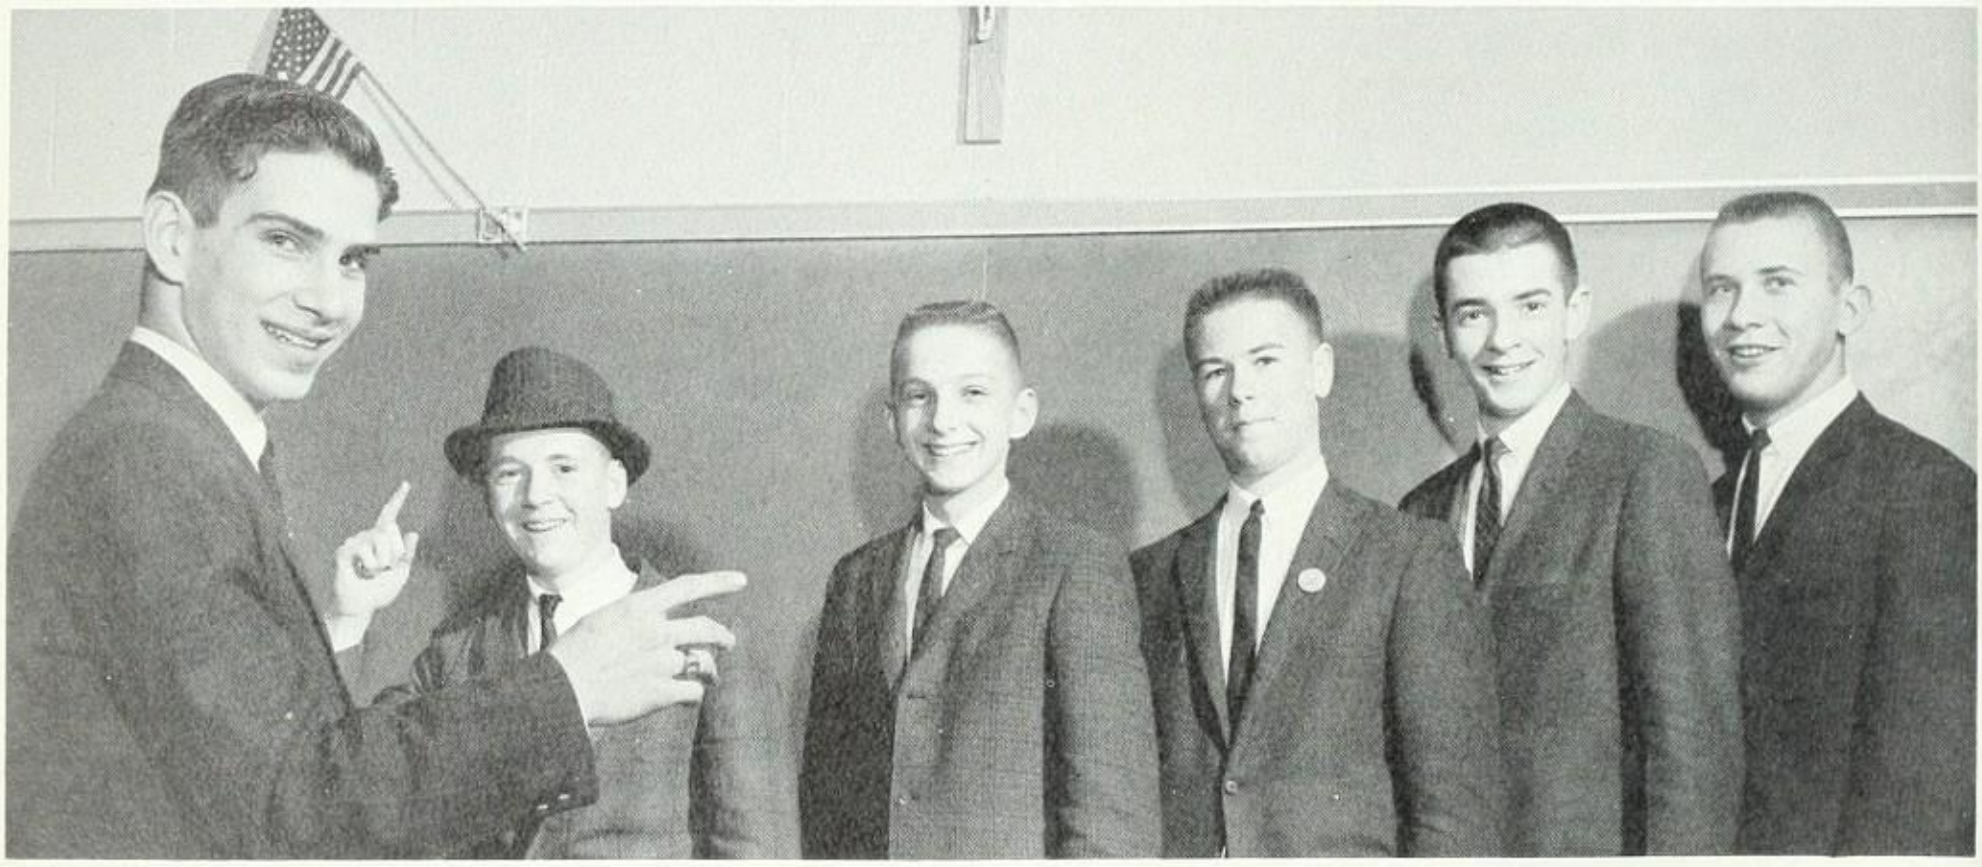
John Swift, Joseph Buffalin, Robert Huddle, Michael Ross, Anthony Fitzpatrick, Robert McNamara, Mrs. Fisher, Edward Curtin, David Frisk, Michael Morrell and Michael Donlin take time out from World History to examine the news films donated by the Pepsi Cola Company.

"The die is cast" declare 140 Latin scholars, Aidan Burnell, Andrew Ewanyk, Thomas McCarthy, Anthony Crescenzi, William Cady, Thomas Babcock and John Trainor.

Geometry teaches the sophomore logic and organization—teaches him to prove what he states—to base his point on analysis and solid reasoning. Biology, the science of life, introduces him to the complexities of living things.

Here, in the sophomore year, the student takes a look at life—his world history course weaves the fascinating web of human life through the ages—and begins to form that philosophy which he will carry through life—that philosophy that is himself.



German I interests these enthusiastic students, Paul Ekes, Donald Mustico, Paul Costic, James Winch, Richard North and Michael Malone as they sing an old folk song about a boy and a hat.

Joseph Hordeyczuk, David Mamaux, Ben D'Aloisio and Donald Miller use their brawn in taking down bleachers for a pep assembly.

Poodle raffle enthusiasts John Donahue and Louis Ciarlo (standing) Timothy Phillips and William Fernan (sitting) help Christopher Lockwood show off 140's prize poodle.

James Holleran, Michael Bennett, Dominic Pagio, James Barrett (standing) Joseph Welch, Steven Kessing, Joseph Lagonegro and Kevin Graham take a casual attitude toward English, as they read and philosophize.

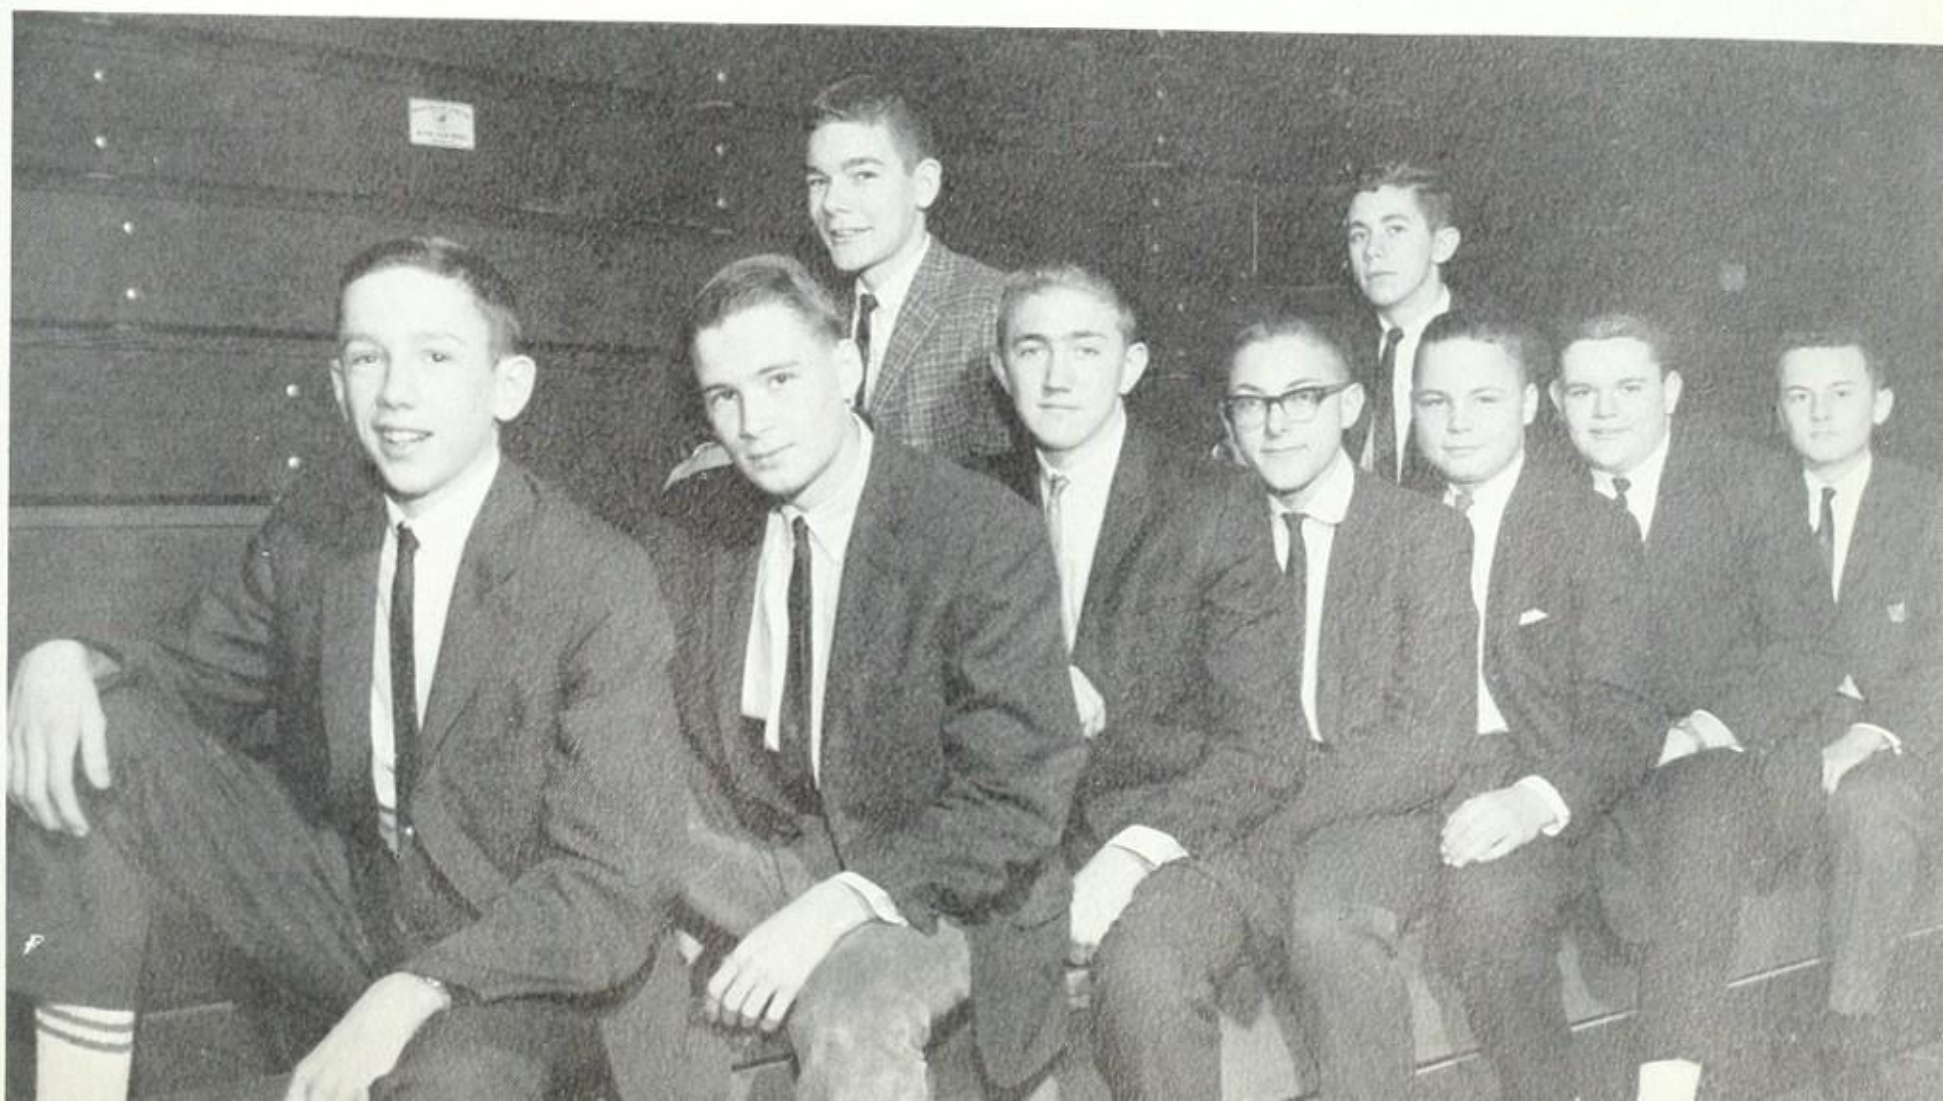
Thomas Kennedy, Stanley Wijkowski, Michael Farrell, Roger Dashner, Michael Clune, Thomas Argetsinger, and Robert Ripley (first row) Brian O'Donnell and James Merriam (back) relax in bleachers before the assembly.



Jeanne Edsall, Marilyn Brown, Kathleen Clary, Marcelline Barrett, Linda Fleming (back), Susan Gribbin, Mary Ellen Miller, Mary Beth Schultz and Esther Johnson gather around Father Reinhart for post-conference discussion.

Aspiring scholars Sharon Sheehan, Mary Gedatus, Carole Chalk, Jude Wenzel, Donna Collins, Phyllis Fillmore (sitting), Kathleen Curtin, Patricia Sherwood, Kathleen Lyman, Donna Brennan, Kathleen Tuccinardi, and Janet Belligotti examine the library's paperbacks.

Ann Millikin, Donella Dean, Marlene Hurley, Kathleen Shine, Francine Waschezen, Mary C. Ripley sport their new and old blazers.

His religion course gives him a gentle boost in deciding that philosophy. It teaches him ethics—it teaches him morality. Like geometry, second year religion presents set and definite laws, rules unchangeable—a mold in which the sophomore image is cast.

And he takes another step up the path.

Top to bottom: Kathleen Gaffey, Mercedes Wertz, Margaret Nolan, Josephine Lutz and Kathleen Hennessy show their pleasure in belonging to the only underclassmen homeroom upstairs.

Rebecca Chayka demonstrates the action of the springboard in gym class for Stephanie White and Andrea Lawless.

Ronald Kittner, Rex Merritt, Michael Amisano, John Buzzetti, William Huddle and Joseph Conroy stop by the bookstore to buy supplies from Mrs. Comstock.

101

Top to bottom: Francis Murray, Timothy Troy, Ronald Kowalska, James Kamas, Ronald Brendis, Timothy Lockwood, Anthony DeBlasio, William Kelly and Daniel Murphy return to homeroom from auditorium balcony after First Friday Mass.

David Fetter, Michael Ervin, James Rogers, Lawrence Snyder and Paul Kessing demonstrate the season's spirit of giving while packing the poor baskets for the Golden Mass.

They descend on Notre Dame's hallowed halls every September, a day before the upperclassmen. Arriving as crown princes of grammar schools, they find themselves crownless by 3:15 that day. Confused, amazed, and perhaps disappointed, they begin their high school days at 1400 Maple Avenue.

Fortunately, the kindly upperclassmen are a great help in making "the green ones" feel welcome. Initiation takes place on Hi-Fi Day as the frosh wear weird costumes, run errands and kow-tow to seniors and juniors, and exhibit their talent on-stage for the entire student body. With the traditional dance that evening, frosh are officially "in."

Mr. Stillhard demonstrates the principles of electricity to (clockwise from front left) John Sheehan, John DeSocio, Paul Zoltowski, Donald Carmody, James Larson, Martin Murray, and Michael Heib.

William Deubel, John Kent, (sitting) John Bevilaqua, Peter Sheahan, Mike Hanrahan and Allan Mallette discuss the symbols hanging on the Jesse Tree.

Joseph Bumbalo, David Healy, William Morrell, John Lyman (kneeling). Daniel Stowell, Joseph Maio and Edwin Miller (standing) prepare to receive Holy Communion in the school chapel.

Leo Rhode, Richard Salmon, John Irwin, Darrell De Pue (standing)—David Merriam, Donald Mann (sitting) put their time to good use in the Earth Science lab.

Soon the freshmen feel right at home as assignments pile up. The academic program offered to the ninth-grader is designed to prepare him for intellectual maturity. The religion course broadens and deepens the student's ideas of Christianity's Divine Founder; English reviews grammar, expands vocabulary and literary judgment, and helps the young learner develop poise through oral projects.

Joseph Cascio, Philip Devon, Philip Richmond and James Kieffer eagerly contribute their share to James Mayes for the Missions.

Father Reinhart lends a helping hand as Joseph Kosmicki, Bernard Minch, Vincent Rudzki, James Dartt, James Collins, William Raplee (standing) James Ewanyk and Paul Backes (seated) dress for Mass.

Abstract thinking proves a demanding task as the freshman approaches his algebra or general mathematics course; first, principles, then, application. Science courses explain everyday phenomena and establish habits of careful and exact observation. Citizens within a few years of voting familiarize themselves with the basic facts of world economic problems in the ninth grade social studies course; they will all too soon bear the responsibility of applying Christian principles to the solution of some of these.

FRESHMEN

Taking a peek through the library doors are Julie Bogardus (sitting) and Carol Luisi, Anne LaComb, Sharon Moretti, Kathleen Gedatus, Margaret Osborne and Mary Ann Grumley.

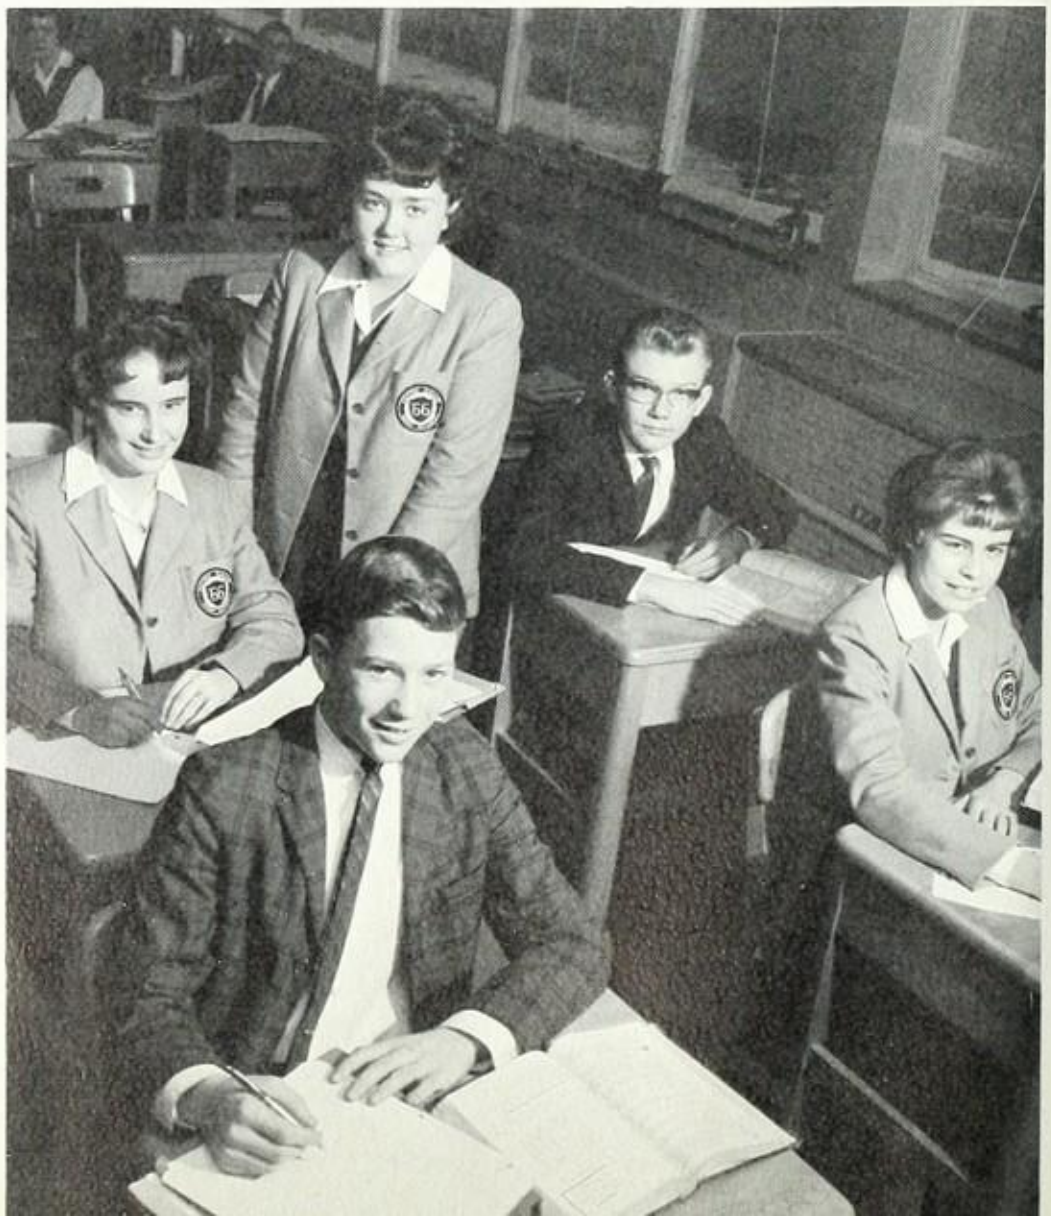
Karen Bolla, Ann Lagonegro, Jared Foulke, Robert McGurgan and Linda Wodnick try their hand at it after the explanation.



Mary Almon, John Tanaka, Richard Kirkendall, and Jon Mellor relax a moment waiting for the bell to announce the end of the class, being a little wiser than when they came in.

Ready to board the bus after another day of hard work are John Gublo, Robert Tangorre, Patricia Schiefen, Mary Ann Gilbert, Joseph Gott, Mary McDonough and Edward Wijkowski.

Richard Smith, Donald Grace, John Leonard and James Barry wonder if they're in the right class as Sister Joachim starts an explanation in Elementary Algebra.

Freshmen soon learn the three allegiances of Notre Dame—Allegiance to God. Cheryl Gavel, Susan Kesser, Joy Lepere.

. . . And allegiance to each other. Julianne Longwell, Patricia Wright, Lynn Ropelewski, Darlene DeDominick.

Delores Leach, Maria Salafia, Margaret Rubach, Maureen Constantine, Theresa Rodzai, Teresa Foody and Kathleen Neylon symbolize 154's success in the PTA membership drive.

. . . Allegiance to country. Mary Frances McCarthy, Jolene Barber, and Mary P. Burke.

Lynn Maney, Mary Ann Bromley, Mary Ann Paganelli, Elizabeth Ann Reidy, Kathleen Heppe (standing), Kathleen Mack and Mary Dyer (sitting) admire the Nativity scene on the convent lawn.

Joan DeLaney, Victoria Battersby, Kathleen Schmidt, Lucy Whitney, Jane Cummings, Barbara Anderson (standing), Mary Draghi, Vicki Kessing (sitting) enjoy being members of a new homeroom in their own wing of the school.

Social life for the Notre Dame freshman reaches a climax in the annual "Snow Ball." Snow sculpturing, dancing and—of course—eating highlight this occasion. A class picnic in June consolidates the spirit of the "almost" sophs.

Maureen Welch, Mary Ann Miller, Cathleen Overton, Mary Kathleen O'Brien, Elizabeth Hughes, Mary Kraszewski and Muriel Spaziani gather around the library's owl, representing Coleridge's albatross from the "Rhyme of the Ancient Mariner."

Freshmen indoctrination in September acquaints the new Notre Dame students with the broad spiritual program their school offers them. A resident chaplain, annual retreat, regular conferences and a pervading atmosphere of dedication to Christ-like living sets the face of each freshman toward the goal of Christian adulthood.

ACTIVITIES

To strengthen our spirit, to strengthen our bodies—to strengthen that bond of community spirit that binds Notre Dame to us and ourselves to Notre Dame—we have out-of-school activities.
Organizations grow out of our daily academic program, to challenge us with problems a giant step beyond routine classroom performance.
Zeal for the welfare of others disciplines itself into the patterns of action mapped out for us in apostolic groups. Career clubs beckon us toward future goals. Varsity and intramural sports temper the strictly intellectual demands of the daily curriculum. Talents and social graces find a stage set many times a year for their display.
Notre Dame bears its share, and more, of the "education of the whole man."

Senior Representatives: Carol Billman, Timothy Clark, Marceline Lyon, James Ramich.

The Student Council at Notre Dame acts as mediator between students and faculty. The Council can operate successfully only with the aid and cooperation of the student body. Every single student's membership makes the Council most representative of student interest.

The S. C. not only promotes school activities but also engages in community and national projects. Because of tremendous student cooperation, the Red Cross Blood Bank, sponsored by the Council, realized 175 pints this year. The March of Dimes drive was also met with enthusiasm.

These are only two of the highlights of the work of the Council. Routinely, its quiet and efficient daily functioning imparts a unique quality to N.D. spirit.

Freshman Representatives: Michael Harris, Jerome Hall, Theresa Rodzai, Ellen MacNamara, John Sheehan, Sharon Moretti.

Ecumenical spirit moves the Student Council officers, Anthony Cicotti, Treasurer; Catharine Creighton, Vice-President; Bernadette Rossi, Secretary; and David Ford, President, to present a check to Bishop Kearney for his trip to Rome, while Father Reinhart looks on.

Student Council President David Ford and March of Dimes chairman David Colegrove crown Robert McGurgan and Dolores Leach Duke and Duchess of Dimes.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Senior retreatants mirror the serious thoughts in their minds as they kneel prayerfully in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament during the days of their final high school retreat.

RETREAT MASTERS

Notre Dame's annual retreat filled the minds and hearts of the students during the first two and one-half days of Holy Week, April 8-10. Rev. Bruno Cocuzzi, O. C. D. and Rev. Timothy McGough, O. C. D., both from the monastery in Waverly, New York, conducted the exercises.

A pilgrimage to Lourdes found these Notre Damers praying to Our Lady, Janet Allen.

Preparation for Saturday night adoration is cared for by Father Reinhart and captain John Hintz.

Looking over the Sodality agenda with Sister Jane Frances are officers Peter Punzo, Treasurer; Bernadette Bauer, Secretary; William Fetter, Prefect; and Kathleen Malone, Vice Prefect.

Summer School of Catholic Action delegates Kathleen Malone, William Fetter, James Mockler and Patricia McCarthy enjoy an evening in New York at Times Square.

Highlight of the Sodality activities for the year is the annual May Day celebration. May Queen Kathleen Malone stands by Our Lady, accompanied by her court and the members of the clergy who officiated at the ceremony. From the top: William Fetter, Kathleen Malone, Daniel Kromer, Marcelene Lyon; Frances Shon, John Basyk; Barbara Anderson, Kathleen Schmidt, Rev. John S. Hayes, Robert Huddle, Marilyn Ripley, Jerome Hall, Rev. Joseph F. Reinhart, Kathleen Daly, Carol Billman; Rev. Philip E. McGhan, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Leo G. Schwab, Rev. Joseph L. Nothnagle.

With a twinkle in his eye Father Damian administers the results of Notre Dame's bandage drive to Rogati, a native African boy.

Everyone loves a song, and senior choral members, William Wereley, Nancy Vail, Eileen Michaels, Marjorie Sydlo, Karen Meck and Sister Marie Raymond Joseph are no exceptions.

Credo

The industrious Credo Staff spends long hours at work while the 1963 yearbook unfolds before their eyes.

1963

Margaret Winieski contemplates her typing duties while Roslyn Crescenzi creates a potential picture to be taken.

Karen McWilliams and Bart O'Brien dream up a captivating caption.

Bernard Marosek and Timothy Clark study various sports plays.

Nancy James and James Young search their minds for a solution to the financial problem.

James Mockler and Kathleen Malone choose their favorite layouts.

From page planning to final proofs, from patron drive to subscription collections, from the first staff meeting to the joyful moment of handing out the finished book, the CREDO challenges every talent of every student who elects to devote time and effort to its successful production. This year's "new look" in some sections balances the traditional approach in others. The many minds and hands and hours that went into the completion of the 1963 yearbook make it truly representative of the best spirit of Notre Dame — a spirit of enthusiasm and perseverance.

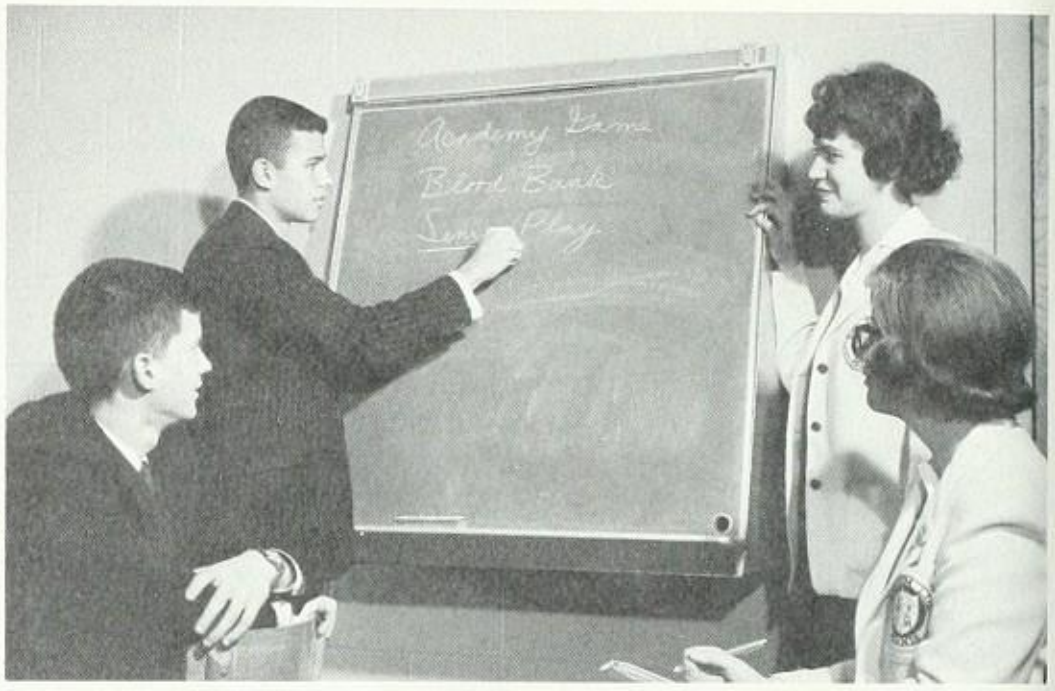
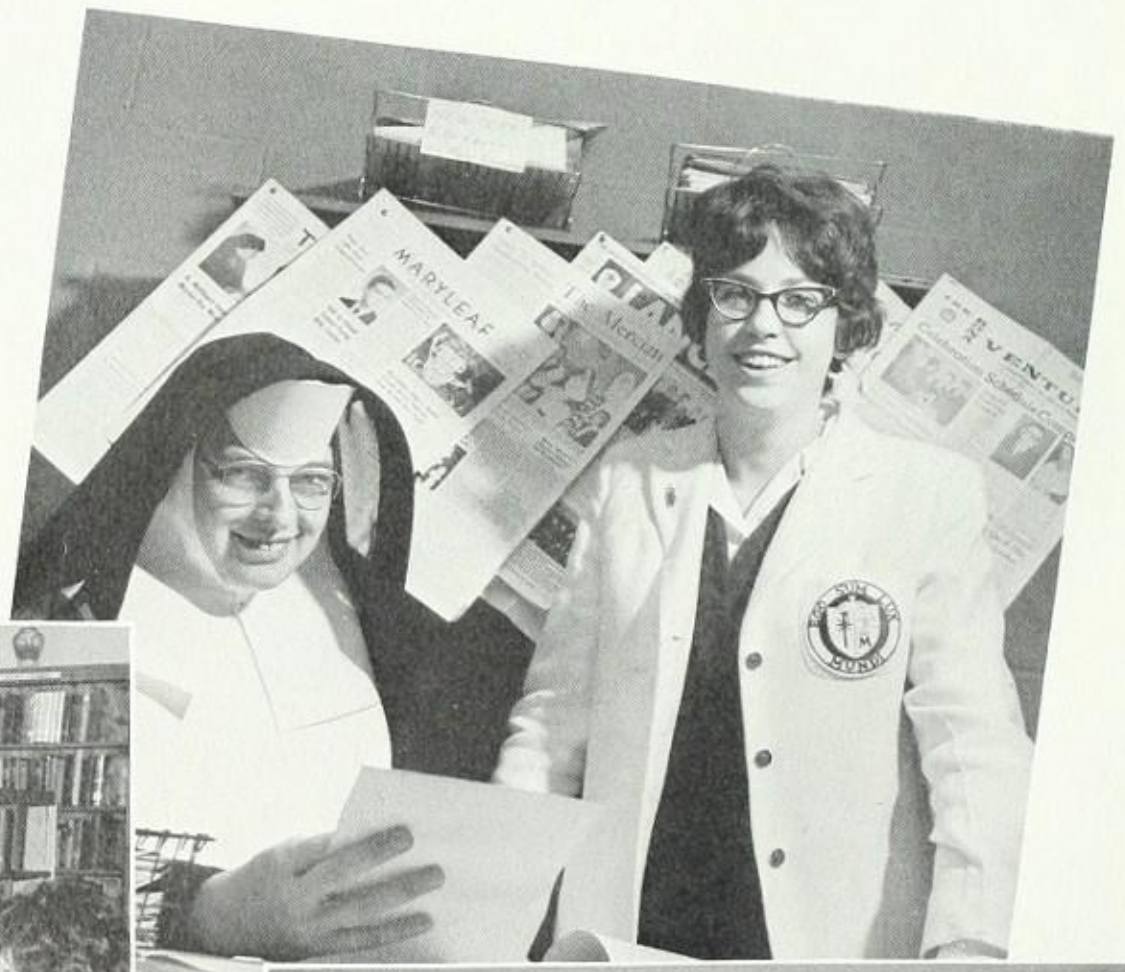
Jocose Joe is found to be even funnier in print by Joseph Milliken, Mary Wichie and David Colegrove.



Points for publication are polled by newspaper reporters Joseph Milliken, James Kessing, Donna Batulis and Sharon Clark.



Maryleaf moderator, Sister Marie Raymond, and editor Margaret McCarthy relish the privacy and convenience of the new journalism room for preparing the Maryleaf.

Maryleaf reporter Mary K. Thomas gives points to other staff members, Thomas McCarthy, Gerald Monahan and Joanne Holleran.

Typists Jean Augustine, Elisabeth Budnik, Nancy Vail, Sharon Minch, Marguerite Segur, Marjorie Sydlo and Janice Simon insure efficient Maryleaf production.

Sister Mary Joachim chats with the officers of her Math Club, Richard DeRisio, President; and James Kessing, Secretary-Treasurer.

Science Club moderator Sister Carmella explains the intricacies of the atom to Club President, James Hall and Secretary-Treasurer, Michael Kromer.

Sister Mary Anne points out an article of interest to the officers of Notre Dame's newest organization, the German Club. They are Janet Allen, Secretary; Bart O'Brien, President; and George Welch, Treasurer.

CLUB OFFICERS

Medicorps officers Mary Ellen Kane, President, and Judy Essen, Secretary, discuss with moderator, Sister Marie Raymond, the latest developments in nursing technique.

Varsity Club officers boost Notre Dame spirit—Frank Stamilio, Sergeant-at-Arms; James Ramich, Vice-President; Bernard Marosek, President; James Studzinski, Treasurer.

Bookmark officers help moderator, Sister Cornelius, in the library. They are Kathleen Mitrus, Sophomore Secretary; Marjorie Hofbauer, Senior Secretary (behind desk), Sharon Minch, Chairman and Carole Limoncelli, Junior Secretary.

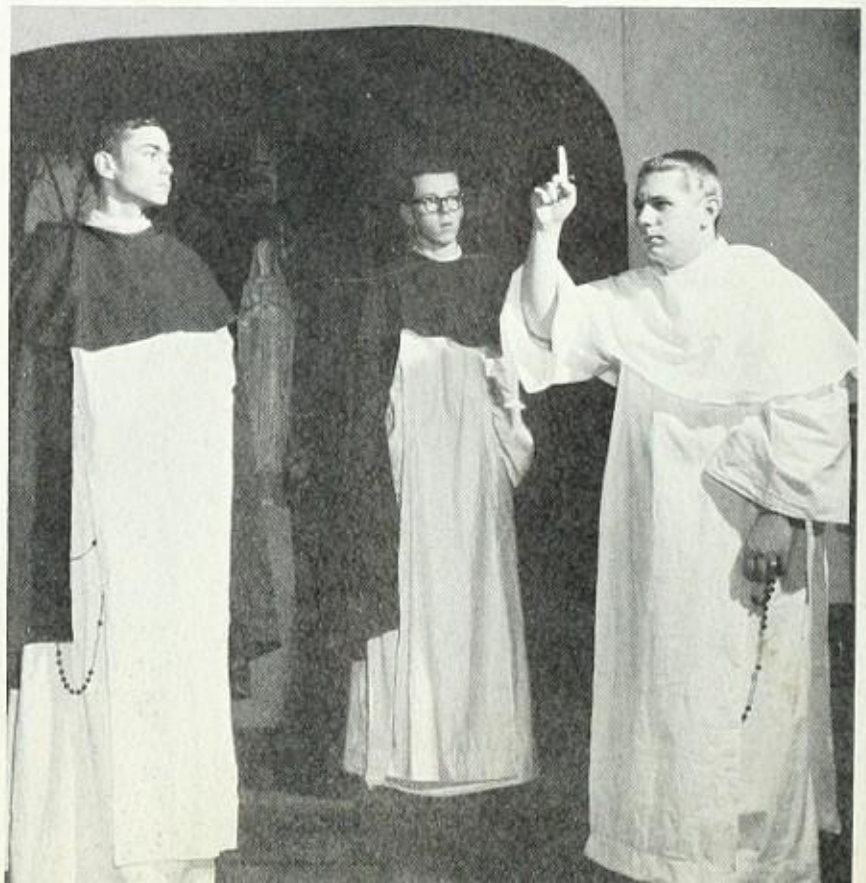
"CITY OF KINGS"

"But I want to stay with you, mother," declares young Martin (Joseph Caparulo) to Ana (Ann Marie Kane) when his father (David Colegrove) proposes to take him and his sister Juana (Sharon Clark) to Panama.

"Why don't you all shut up? My tooth is jumping" cries Brother Gaspar (Kevin Coggins) to his helpful contemporaries Brother Fernando (William Fetter), Brother Alonso (Michael Kromer) and Brother Cipriano (James Meehan).

"No, no. Don't you bother . . . That's what Negroes are for," exclaims Father Pedro (Timothy Clark) to Brother Juan (Denis Maloney) and Francisco (Thomas Costello).



"You are privileged to meet the Viceroy of Peru and the former Governor of Panama, Senor Juan de Porres" utters Brother Francisco as he introduces James Hall and David Colegrove to Brothers Fernando, Juan and Gaspar.

"I suppose it's to be, Miguelito, but I don't feel good enough" confides Martin to a mouse when he learns he's to be a member of the First Order.

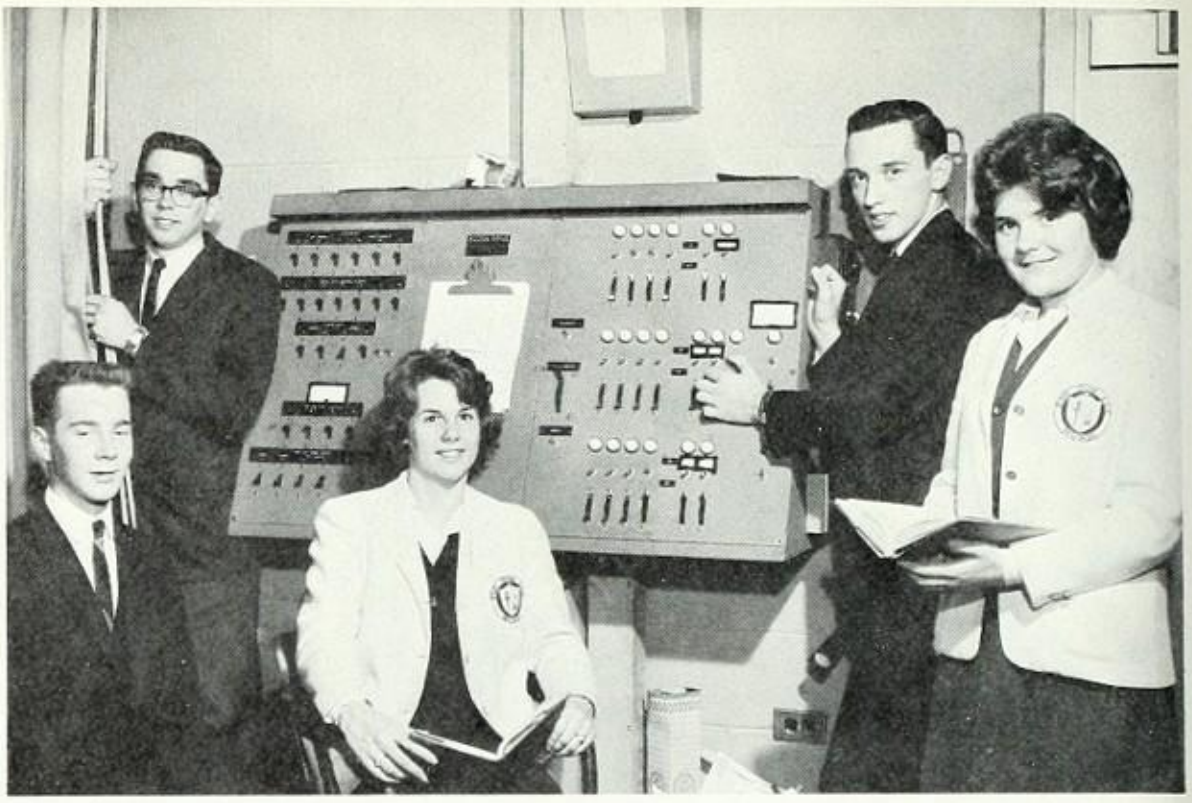
"Father Prior said to come here. He's sick." Vagabonds Poco (Leonard Paganelli) and Repe (John Chapman) shy away from Brother Fernando to their friend Martin.

"To the newest member of the apothecary profession . . ." toast Martin's family and friends (from left) Don Isabel (Marguerite Segur), Ana Gongola (William Little), Mateo (Bart O'Brien), Francisca (Karen McWilliams), and Juana (Bernadette Rossi).

"Mother of God, take thy unworthy servant home," utters Martin as his last words. Accompanying him in his last moment are Brothers Cipriano, Brother Fernando, Mateo, Father Francisco, Father Juan, Archbishop Feliciano, James Hall and the community of monks, Frank Stamilo, Thomas Delaney, William Bale (standing), James Minchin, Michael Kromer, Daniel Collins and Paul Nelson.

Martin kisses the ring of Archbishop Feliciano (George Welch) in humility and obedience.

Phonetics and props were the business of Theresa Josbeno, Kathleen Riddell and Suzanne Butler.



Standing by for effects and accidents were William Wereley, John Winnick, Patricia McCarthy, Paul Kosloski, and Kathleen Michaels.

The City of Kings came to life as the Class of 1963's Senior play. Performed for a capacity audience in both afternoon and evening, this dramatization of the life of St. Martin de Porres, by Urban Nagle, O.P., demanded —and got—the utmost in fine acting, and directing and backstage work. Martin, mulatto son of Juan de Porres, Governor of Panama, epitomized in his life of service to others the arch-virtue, charity. In his time, as in the present, racial inequality bred strife and heartbreak. The stature of the play itself, and the excellence of its presentation, carried a significant message to everyone viewing it.

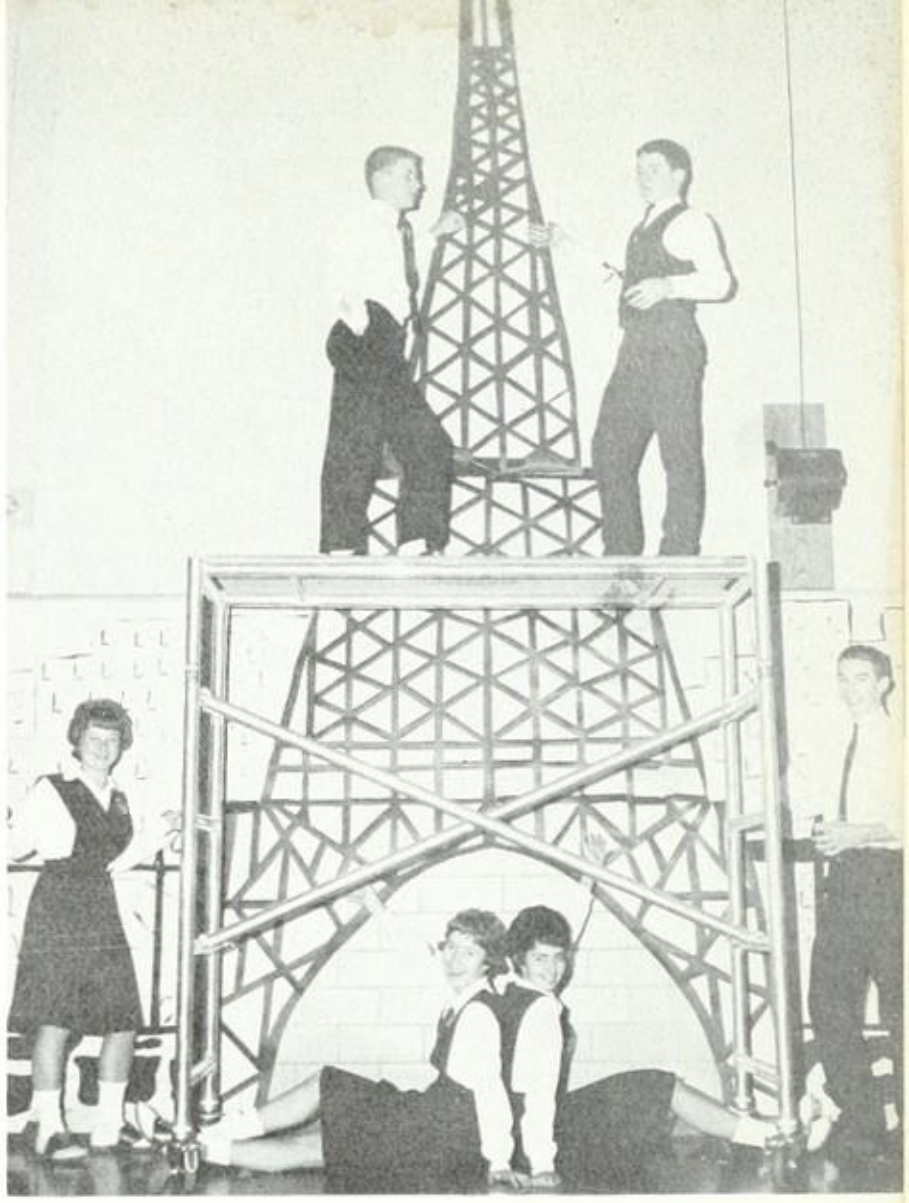
Putting finishing touches on the colorful costumes are Mrs. Langstine and Sister Mary Patrick.

Senior seamstresses Jeanette Sipka and Margaret Leahy help stitch The City of Kings to success.

Information for the College Canvas program is assembled by Lynne MacNamara, Curran Sekella, Joan Farmer and Michael Moran.

The new and very successful N.D. combo, the Tempests, James Hall, John Hall, Denis Maloney, Richard DeRisio and James Kessing tolerate Harry Bullock as he tries his hand at the drums.

Amiable seniors offer their greetings to freshmen at the Welcome Freshmen assembly.



The Eiffel Tower for Moulin Rouge, the Junior Prom, is put together by Marie Barnoski, Morris Karski, Catharine Creighton, Ann Maloney, John Grady and Curran Sekella.

Frosh Barbara Almendinger, Susan Taylor, Margaret Osborn and Mary Frances Richardson pose with their boxing kangaroo snow sculpture.

SPORTS

. . . To crystallize those rules of grace and social custom we have learned. To materialize that philosophy of life we have acquired through widened knowledge. To practice, in fact, what we preach. To translate the calculations and reckonings of the mind into the language of practice. It is for these reasons we have athletics. The transformation of action to thought—that is learning.
The transformation of thought to action—that is athletics. Sports, physical fitness, or call it what you will, it is the other half of the balance. It is the truth, the visual effect of the active mind.

VARSITY FOOTBALL

Under the capable tutelage of first-year coach Nick Teta, the Crusaders hustled their way to a very impressive 5 and 2 season. Overcoming inexperience and a lack of size, the varsity ran roughshod over the first four opponents before falling to S.H.S. in a hotly contested battle.

Perhaps the sweetest victory of the season was a 27-6 romp over cross-town rival E.F.A. at N.D.'s newly inaugurated stadium. Further testimony of the Crusader's gridiron prowess was their convincing 18-7 win over highly touted Southern Counties League Champion Horseheads.

The success achieved by the '62 football Crusaders was boosted by such standouts as fullback Jim Ramich, quarterback Mike Johnson, and linemen Mike Malone, Jim Meehan, and Bill Knott, but much credit must also be given Coach Teta and his assistants for their fine jobs.

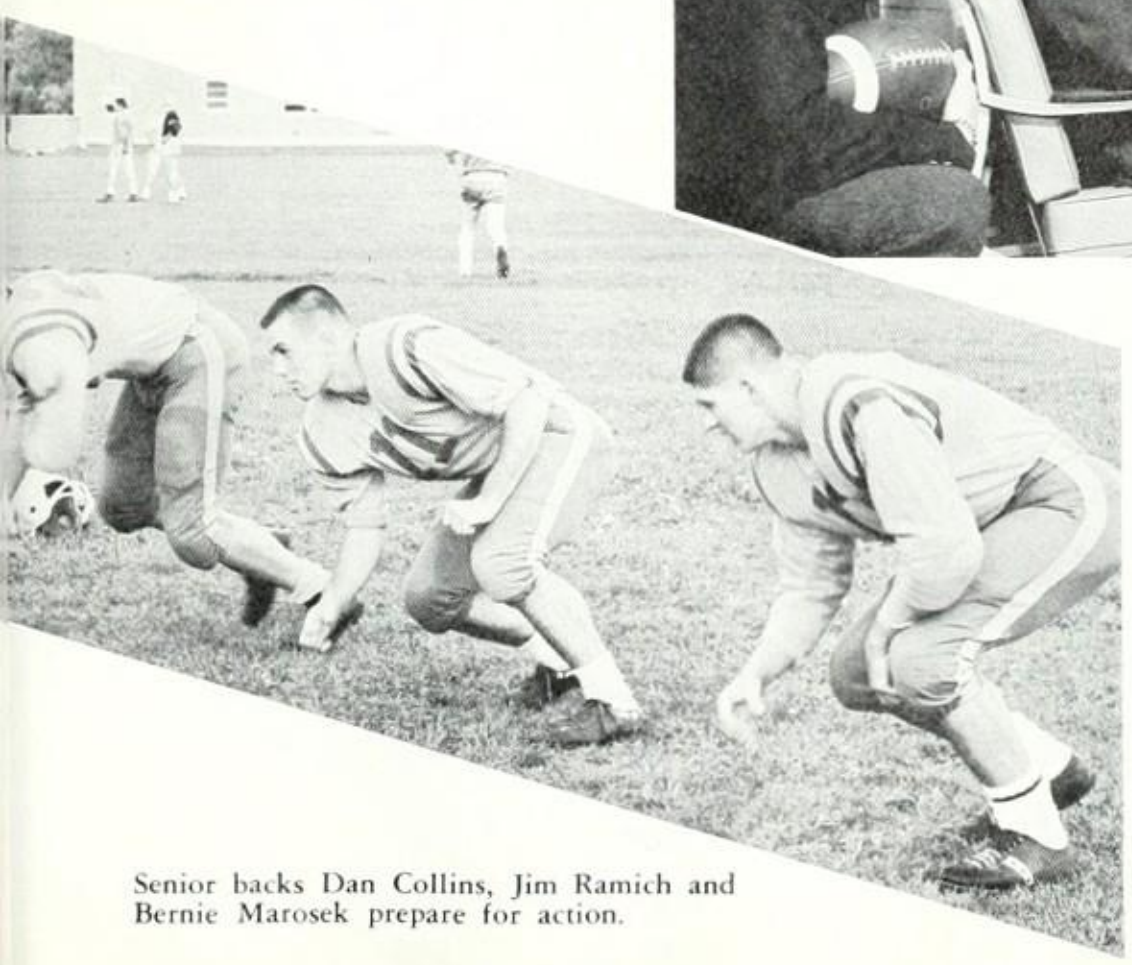
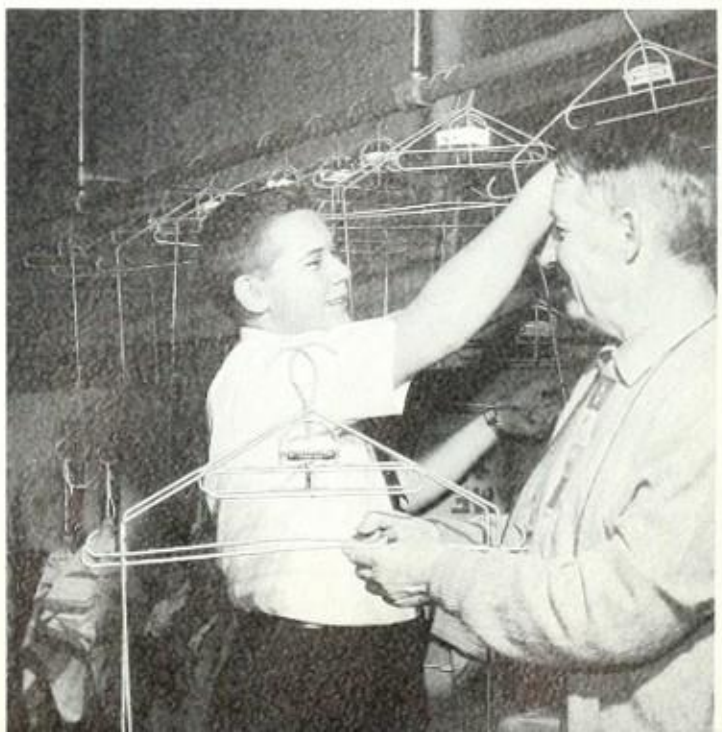
McCarthy, Louie Holleran and Father Reinhart.

Pigskin Paragons have a post-season talk with Coach Teta. N.D.'s contribution to All-City for this year are Jim Meehan, Jim Ramich, Mike Malone, Mike Johnston and Frank Stamilio.



Senior backs Dan Collins, Jim Ramich and Bernie Marosek prepare for action.

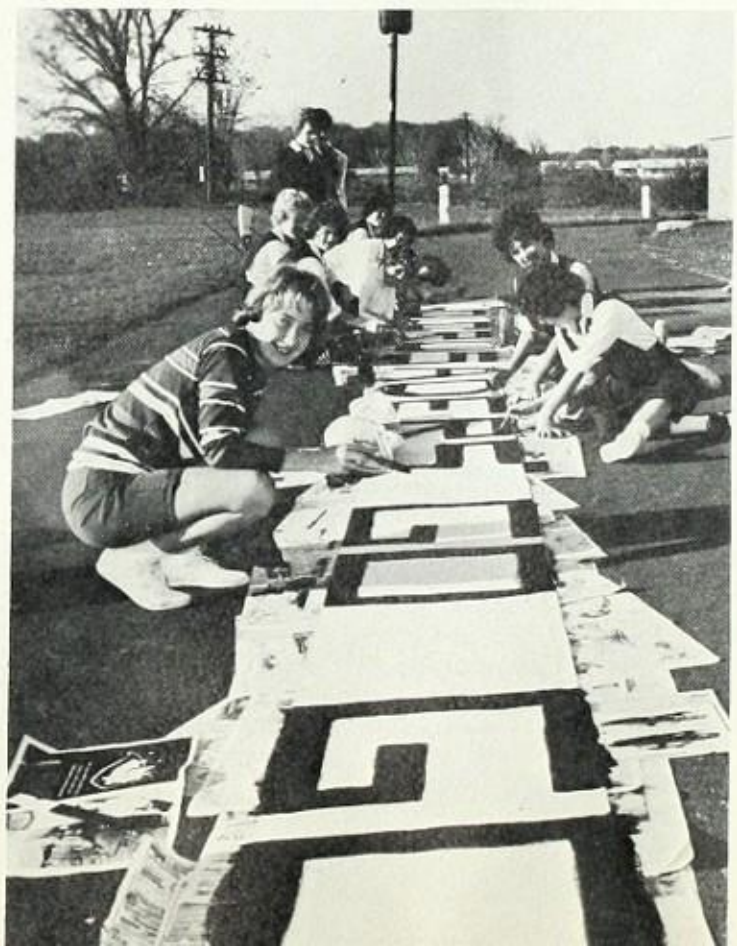
Locker room duty is attended by John Post and Mr. Lowery.



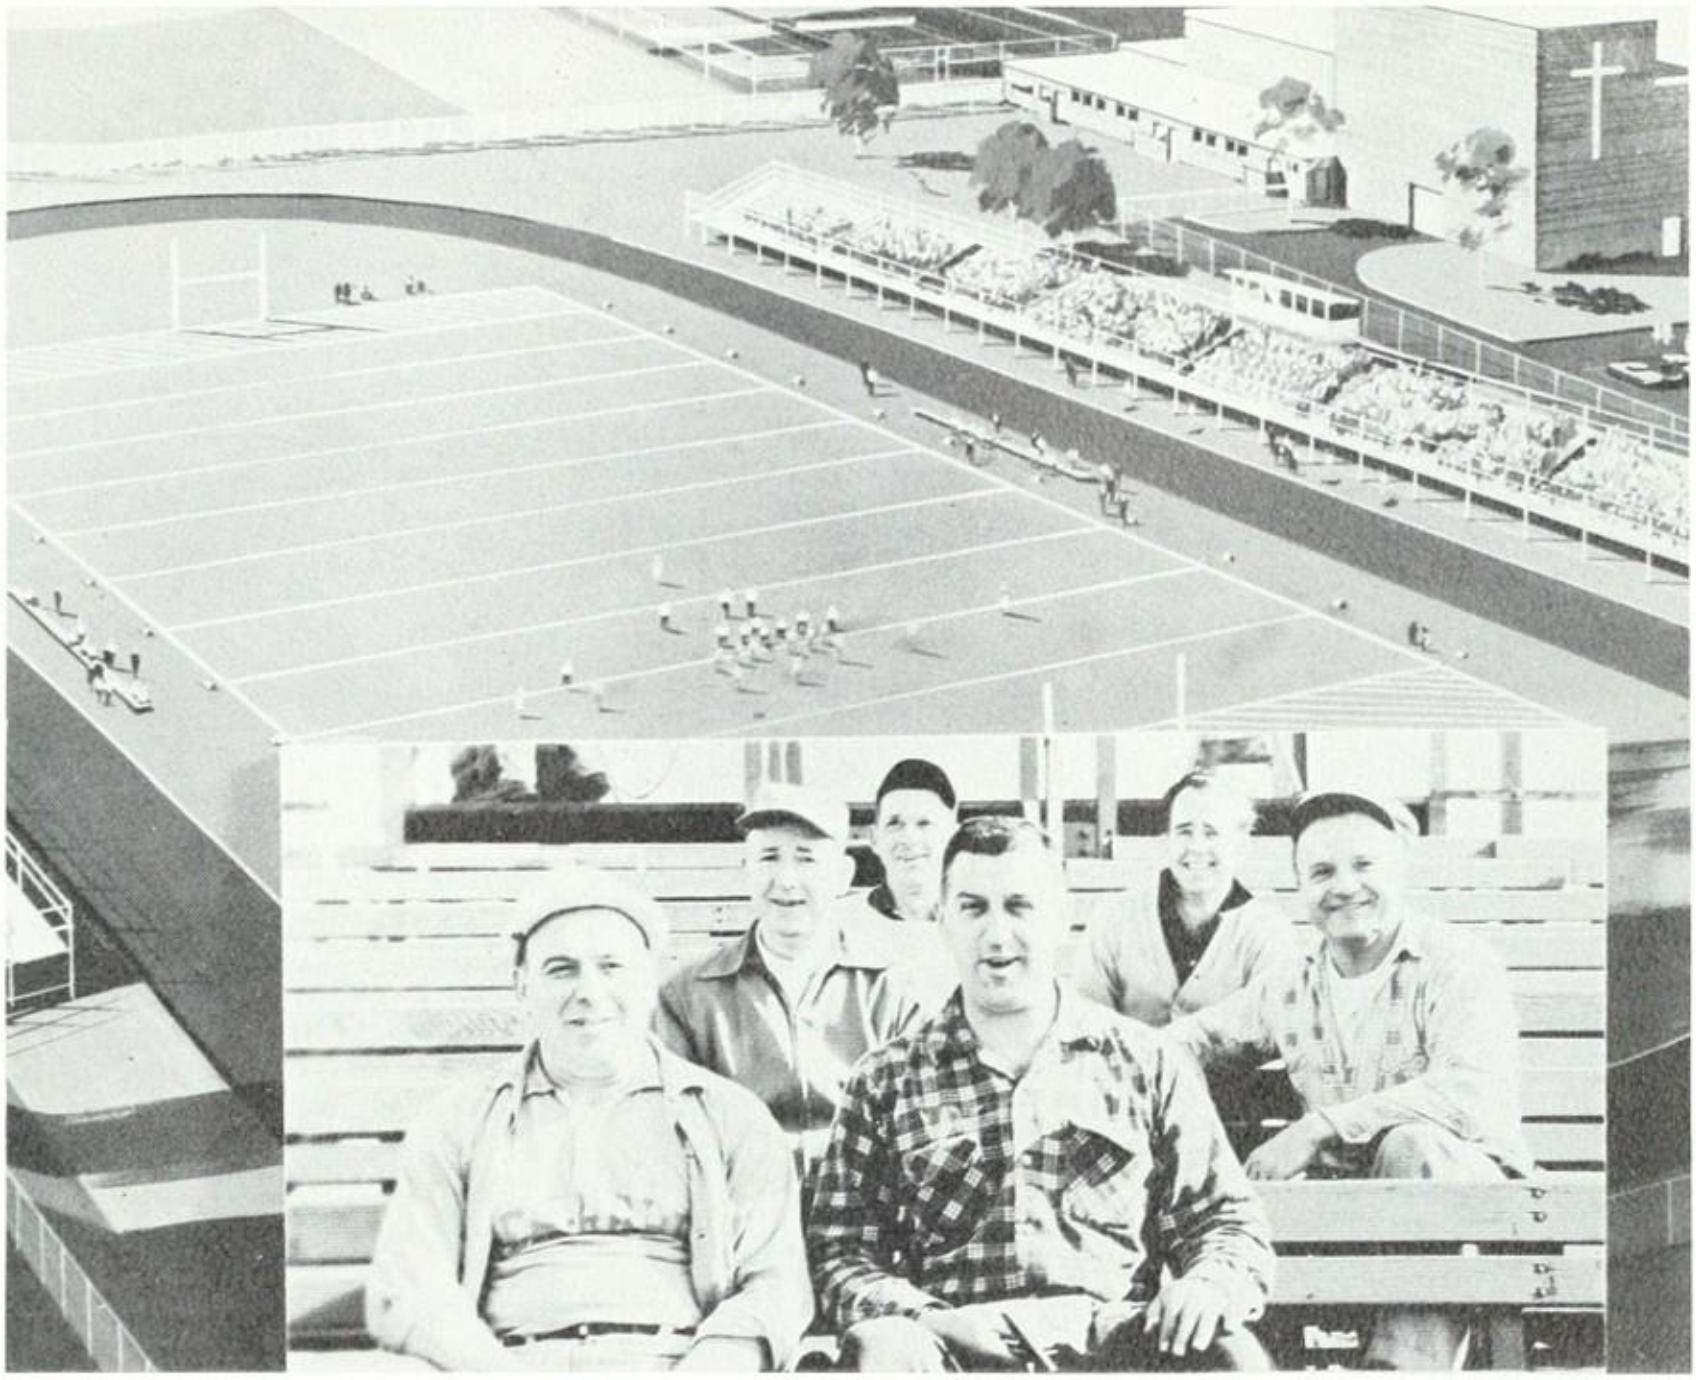
S. C. President Dave Ford crowns Brenda Wetherbee, N. D.'s first Homecoming Queen, as attendants Mary Gallagher, Bernadette Rossi, and Nancy James smile their approval.

Academy Cheerleaders, Mary Jane Wiphler and Abie Ober, exchange best wishes with Marcy Lyon, Dolores Brennan and Joan McCarthy before the game that gave us a 27-0 victory.

Spirited Notre Dame girls prepare a written boost to their team before the Homecoming Game.

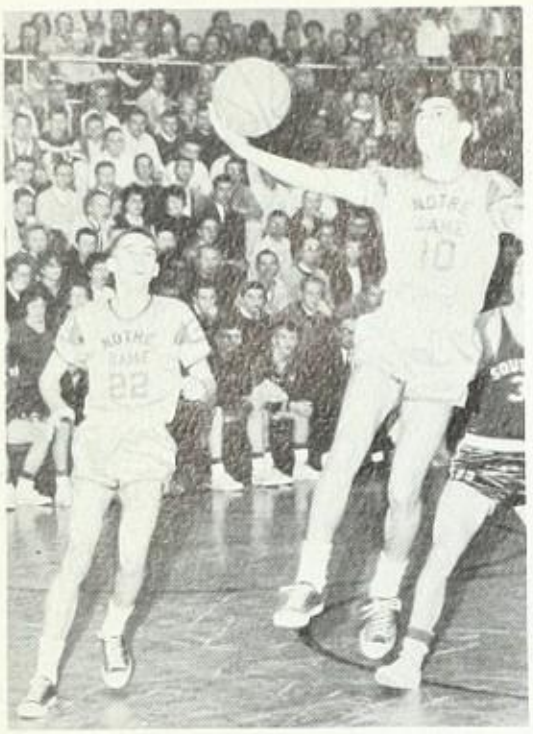


THE EVOLUTION OF A STADIUM AND FIRST HOMECOMING



In the foreground of our stadium success are volunteer friends and fathers Frank Ferraro, Paul Brann. Richard Fernan, John Limoncelli, Walter Bailey and Frank Belligotti.

Dignitaries present at the stadium dedication ceremonies are Rev. Leo Dunne C. SS.R., assistant superintendent of Rochester Diocese schools, Rev. Joseph Reinhart, chaplain of Notre Dame, Edward T. Lagonegro, Mayor of the city of Elmira, and Donald S. Keeler, Superintendent of Elmira schools.



Outdistancing all opponents, Ron Limoncelli drives for two. Ready to help is Don Kent.

Marty O'Donnell (20) and Don Kent (22) vie for a rebound against Mansfield as Bernie Marosek and several Mansfield players look on.

Handicapped by a lack of height and faced with the toughest schedule in N. D.'s history, the Crusaders found themselves on the short end of many close games. Despite an unspectacular 9-10 record the '62-'63 varsity proved themselves a challenging match for any of the top area teams with all but a few of those games decided in the closing minutes.

Notre Dame all season long adhered to a ballhawking, fast-breaking type of game which wreaked havoc with many of their taller opponents. The highlight of the season was perhaps the season's opener, a win over Aquinas Institute, the same team which later beat them for the Diocesan Championship in Rochester. The Crusaders also held undefeated Mansfield to a season's low of 52 points while giving the Tigers one of their closest games of the season.

All-City selectee Ron Limoncelli sparked the team throughout much of the season with added boosts coming from Don Kent, Jim Ramich, and Bernie Marosek. Senior Marty O'Donnell also provided an additional scoring and rebounding punch midway through the season. With a strong nucleus returning next year, coach Jim Flynn can be counted on to mold one of the area's best in '64.

School spirit is an integral part of life at Notre Dame. Helping to foster it on the sports field are the Cheerleaders. Capably led by captain Ann Marie Kane, they added much to a successful year in sports. Their tireless devotion to team and school spirit was greatly appreciated. We wish to say "Thanks, girls, for a job well done."
